DIVINE DOMAIN: MADNESS

CLERIC DOMAIN OPTION

Manic devotion burning in his dark eyes, a dwarf clad in black robes clutches a chained symbol of Torog to his broad chest as he scouts a long-abandoned mineshaft for signs of trouble. His keen ears pick up a tell-tale scrabbling of claw on stone - a kobold scout - and he wheels around to meet the creature climbing into an ambush position on an outcropping. Their eyes meet, and the eyes of the kobold widen, its gaze utterly blank. In a haze, the kobold wanders blunderingly away from the dark dwarf, slowly back up the tunnel to where the dwarf's kin lie in waiting.

"Who said that?" clamors a town guard in a near shout, his sword halfway out of its sheath. "Coward! Show your face! I'll have your head!" he raves, as his comrades quickly work to restrain him, exchanging worried glances. Pressed up against a nearby wall, an inconspicuous female tiefling watches with a subtle smirk. "Your friends wish you harm," she continues in a completely inaudible whisper, heard by none but the frenzied guard, "You should do something about that."

Wandering through densest forest for hours on end, a weary band of orcs stumble to a halt. Scarred by thorny underbrush and having lost several of their number to the local wildlife, morale is running low, but the growling insistence of their war leader has them press on. None notice the old man in red hiding in the the shadows of tree boughs, watching their party.

"Take a left, or is it a right?" he whispers into the mind of the war leader, "Oh well, take one, than the other. One of them is bound to work out in the end."

Ailments of the mind and sway over thoughts come naturally to those with the Madness domain. Though some may see them as fools, lunatics, or cultists, clerics of a mad god can do much to inspire free thought or to inflame the passions of those around them, being as easily artists and savants as threatening psychotics. Almost universally of a chaotic bent, clerics of Madness can serve mad deities of all stripes, from Cyric, Sheogorath, Torog, Klyber, Zyrag, and the Laughing God Who Has No Temples to the myriad elder gods and great old ones who inhabit a space beyond sanity and the stars themselves.
